Genesis 12:1-9

Abram lived in a nice place named Haran. He lived there with his entire family — his dad, his brothers, and his wife Sarai.

One day God spoke to Abram and said, "Leave this home you know, and the friends you love, and go to the land I will show you. You will become the father of many. You will be famous and you will help people. I will bless you."

God asked Abram to follow Him, but He didn't tell Abram where he was supposed to go. God told Abram he would be the father of many, but Abram and Sarai were very old, and they had never had any children.

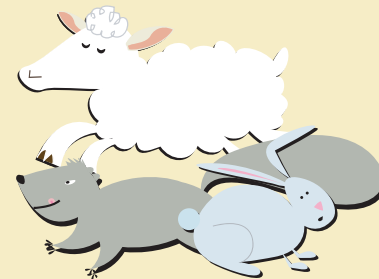

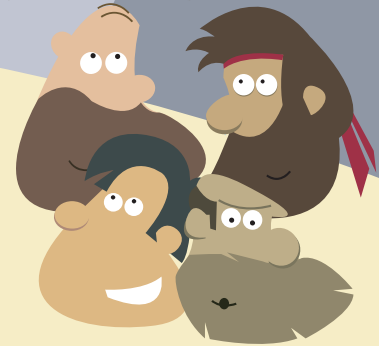

But Abram knew that God was a good leader. He wanted to follow God no matter what, so he said, "Let's go!" and took his first step to follow. Abram moved his wife, his workers and all of his animals.

Abram followed God, and everyone followed Abram, through the desert and by the sea. They traveled by the pyramids and through the land of Egypt. They finally stopped in a place called Canaan. When they got to Canaan, God spoke to Abram again and told him about the great adventures and wonderful things God was going to give him since he followed God so obediently.

Abram followed God to a new land. He did what God asked him to do. Abram knew that God was a good leader, so he followed God's directions!
